Why a Museum?

Museums seem to be everywhere and dedicated to all things imaginable. One needs only to look at the table of interests found under the name Smithsonian to realize that a smorgasbord of artifacts, fine art, fossils, natural history, and mechanicals both stationary and movable abound in collections, some, thirty miles apart. (Let's not forget the Inaugural Ball collection of First Ladies' dresses)

In contrast, The Stone Harbor Museum is basically an archival museum. Over the 100 year history of the town, it seems that letters, photographs and post cards along with written commentaries basically told the Stone Harbor story. The town really didn't make industrial items and there are few, if any, "Made in Stone Harbor" relics. The last one hundred years saw people come to Stone Harbor for the same reason they come today - the sand and the ocean and bays. People come for a week or a fortnight to get away and relax. Part of that relaxation is to spend some time looking at old pictures and reading about the life of Stone Harbor. That happens in the museum. The museum, like many, is staffed with volunteers. A commodity that is rapidly disappearing - everywhere! A cause for concern.

In a recent article in March/April 2015 Yankee magazine, Howard Mansfield regarding museum house tours said, "It can't be tightly paced as a 12-part cable-TV drama queued up for binge watching. It can't dash click-by-click to match your whim. Not long ago, historical memory was New England's great story to tell a nation hungry for history. Back in that pre-digital era you didn't have to promise visitors the sun, moon and stars to get them in the door. But now, what's a small museum to do?" In the same article, Michelle Stahl, director of the Monadnock Center for History and Culture in Peterborough, New Hampshire noted that "people want their buttons pushed all the time. There's no room for stepping back and being quiet."

Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote, "The Past will not sleep, it works still. With every new fact a ray of light shoots up from the long buried years."

Our museum in Stone Harbor is there to "shoot those rays of light" that are buried in our town's past for those who want to search it out rather than be entertained. You are most certainly welcome in the Stone Harbor Museum to see and search.

New Trustees

Due to Vince LaManna and Linda Picanza resigning and the passing of Virginia Maslin, three vacancies existed on the board. These were filled by Bob Levins, Martin Lukacs, and Kathy Schoenberger.

Bob Levins is a retired Police Inspector from the Philadelphia Police Force and now is self-employed looking after properties in the off-season. He and his wife Helen live in a vintage Stone Harbor home built in 1912. Bob has been a museum docent for the past four years and is looking forward to increased involvement as a member of the board.

Retired dentist, Martin "Marty" Lukacs served as a Captain in the U.S. Air Force in Germany from 1972-1975. He retired from the New Jersey Air National Guard in 1996 as a Lieutenant Colonel. Marty has served on the Board of Directors for Magyar Savings Bank, Delta Care Flagship Health Systems, and the Milltown Public Library. Currently the Membership Chair for the American Legion, he and his wife Mary have been enjoying Stone Harbor for many years.

Former teacher, Kathy Schoenberger finished her career in the Stone Harbor School District. She and her husband, the Rev. Dr. Glenn Schoenberger, moved to Stone Harbor in 1983 when he became pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Our Saviour. Kathy's interest in serving on the board stems from her family history -Kathy's mother, Janet Whiteside, enjoyed summering on 83rd St. in the 1920s and her great uncle, H. Irvin Gerhart, served two terms as mayor in the 1930s.

President's Corner

Despite our chronic growing pains, the Summer Season ahead will be an exciting one. We now have a professional to direct us, an increase in our Volunteer Staff, and new programs for the community being scheduled. We plan to have an entertaining and educational program each month. Along with other Cape May County organizations the U.S. Coast Guard will be honored this summer.

There continues to be a great deal of interest in the future location of the museum. A look back at the history shows that the present location was selected because the Board of Education was planning to vacate the site at the time the Archival Committee was searching for a home. A serendipitous coincidence. A mere five years later, the museum's Long Range Plan included the need for larger quarters; other than size, the type of building was not specified. In 2008, when the new library building was to be situated on the beach and the museum was to be housed there, the quarters were to be state-of-the-art with built-in digital capabilities. The décor featured mirrors and metal. Then came the Pebbles dream which ended when an inspection required improvements too costly to consider. Even with those improvements, the museum would be faced with some of the shortcomings of the present cottage.

Now, there is the possibility, very "iffy", that the museum could become part of Borough Hall if the Police Department were to move to a new building. That location, would provide a new home for the museum in an older building but with modern, more cost efficient utilities. Another dream!

Have a beautiful Summer and plan to visit us when you're in town!

Terrie Cwik, President

The New Director Writes...

Since being hired in November, I have been cataloging the museum collection into a software program called Past Perfect. I am also working on creating new exhibits and displays and would like to take this opportunity to ask if you have any photos or memorabilia about Stone Harbor that you would like to share with the community. These objects could be loaned to the museum for a few months and returned to the owner after they have been enjoyed by museum visitors.

The museum is the keeper of the history. It ties the community together. Some ask why a history museum is needed. My reply to this question is: "Do you know what was here before the big mansions, or better yet, when the only inhabitants were wild cows and other animals? Do you know where you could find the highest dunes in New Jersey? Did you know that from our coast you could witness Revolutionary War sea battles?"

The "need" of a museum is to gather all these facts, all these archival materials, and make them available for all to discover and enjoy.

Bruce Tell, Director

In Memoriam

In the past few months, the museum and Stone Harbor have had to say goodbye to some dear friends: Azalea Ellis, Dede Harris, Virginia Maslin, and Stan Moore.

Azalea was a dedicated docent from the first time the museum opened its doors. She was also the interviewer for many of the oral histories the museum has compiled. Last summer, Azalea was awarded a plaque in recognition of her dedication.

DeDe was an enthusiastic museum member and supporter. She created the list of Stone Harbor trivia questions used in the impromptu contests at the centennial concerts. Dede was also the subject of an oral history.

Although her term as a docent and board member was brief, Virginia's presence remains with us through her photography and the museum events she visually captured.

Stan Moore helped with the opening of the museum. He spent many hours cleaning, painting, and straightening to get the building ready to receive visitors.

These individuals will continue to live on in the memories they have given to the museum.

Stone Harbor Bound

The museum will be presenting a reading and book signing by author Madeleine Mysko from her second novel, Stone Harbor Bound, Wednesday evening, July 1st at 7 p.m. The event will be held at the American Legion. The book will be available for purchase at the museum gift shop.

The story revolves around a woman recovering from the death of her partner and travelling to Stone Harbor to decide what to do with the bungalow she inherited. While there her life becomes entangled with that of a nearby family.

The author has been coming to Stone Harbor for more than 15 years, having been introduced to the area by her husband. While vacationing during the summer months, she worked on the novel. Mysko spent many hours in the museum researching for her story and has called the museum a "goldmine."

Mysko is a registered nurse and was a member of the Army Nurse Corps during the Vietnam War. Her first novel, Bringing Home Vincent, reflects her experiences at the Burn Ward at Brook Army Medical Center in San Antonio while in the corps. She is a graduate of the Writing Seminars of The Johns Hopkins University and a teacher of creative writing in the Baltimore-Washington area.
